Choosing the Better Part

We live in a very busy world that puts a lot of pressure on people to remain constantly active. The not so subtle message is that our value as human beings can only be measured by our "productive" output. Our Facebook accounts need to be constantly updated to inform our friends of what we are doing. When applying for a job, our resume needs to show a constant theme of accomplishments via continued education, projects completed, promotions received, professional associations joined, etc. College applications need to demonstrate a dizzying amount of student activity. Even our religious lives can become focused on what we are doing (money donated, parish councils, CYO, or other volunteer projects). Oftentimes the things we are doing are very good and have noble motivations. However, we can become so overly focused on what we are doing that we lose sight of the why we are doing it. In this weekend's Gospel reading (Luke 10:38-42) Our Lord invites us to re-examine our busyness and properly prioritize our actions through prayer.

Our Gospel reading tells the story of "Martha and Mary," two sisters who encountered Jesus in two very different ways. Jesus and His disciples were welcomed into their home by Martha. She was following the Jewish tradition of offering hospitality to travelers and was following the social custom of the time for the women of the house to serve their guests. Mary on the other hand was following a very unconventional approach to Jesus based on the social expectations of the time. Mary was at Our Lord's feet attentively listening to Him speak. It was not customary for women to take such a position in the living area where the men were being served. When Martha complained to Jesus that Mary wasn't helping her, Our Lord doesn't rebuke Martha. Rather, He sees that she is weighed down and anxious about living up to the social expectations of what she should be doing. Mary had "chosen the better part."

There are some clear lessons that can be drawn from this story. First, we don't need to "do" anything to earn God's love. God doesn't care about how we are living up to social conventions or our standing in society. He desires only for us to have a personal relationship with Him. This can be best fostered through prayer. Second, trying to keep up with all of the social pressures can lead us to become inattentive to our personal relationship with the Lord. As a result we can become anxious and burdened. But by rooting our life in prayer, we foster our relationship with God, and our activities then flow from this relationship. Our work becomes reoriented into giving back to the Lord by service to others. It becomes a source of joy in our life. As we apply this lesson to life, we can more easily overcome the distractions of our culture's expectations where prayer can be put on the back burner. Our Lord makes it very clear that we have to resist this urge and instead make prayer a priority. If we persevere we will be rewarded with a greater peace of mind, a sense of purpose, and a freedom from never ending expectations.

God Bless,

Deacon Brian Connolly
